About the KHC Livestock Investigation Training:

For the past 14 years, the Kentucky Horse Council has offered Livestock Investigation Training to Kentucky law enforcement (including sheriffs, police officers and animal control officers), veterinarians and livestock producers. During the three-day training, attendees learn how to strategically manage horses, cattle and other livestock running at large as well as how to identify at-risk animals. Since its inception in 2008, more than 260 officers from 60 counties have received training. Enhancing the knowledge of Kentucky’s enforcement officials has far-reaching benefits in the Commonwealth’s agricultural community; a good understanding of livestock handling and husbandry increases the likelihood of positive outcomes for animals found at large or in neglectful situations.

The Kentucky Horse Council has nearly 10,500 followers across its social media platforms, as well as a mailing list of nearly that size; the website has a robust equine events calendar, equine health alert page, and internship and employment board, which is often the first place job seekers turn for possible employment. In addition, the KHC hosts industry-specific events such as LIT, Kentucky Equine Networking Association (KENA) dinners and Large Animal Emergency Rescue Training; the charity also owns the easily recognizable license plate of a foal lying in the grass (there are nearly 12,500 of these plates on the road).
